

SEMINAR WORKSHOPS

Don't Risk it - Manage it

(It could be your Keep out of Jail Free Card)

Following on from the very successful series of workshops on 'Managing Your Fleet Legally', FLEETWORLD Magazine is now organising further events that will concentrate on the day-to-day management and administration of fleet risk.

These workshops, commencing in September, will focus on the policies and procedures required to ensure your company complies totally with the Duty of Care Legislation in respect of any employee driving any vehicle on company business.

Consultant Fleet Manager George Emmerson, who has made it his business to fully understand the implications of the legislation from a daily operational point of view, will present the seminars and will ensure that delegates will end the day much better prepared with regard to managing this issue on a day-to-day basis.

George previously managed the fleets at IBM UK, Black Horse Agencies and many others in a consultancy role. He is also the editor of the successful annual Essential Fleet Management Tips and the annual Duty of Care Guide, all published by Fleet World Magazine.

The previous series of workshops received extremely positive feedback with a major plus being a policy whereby delegates learned from each other. These are not events where delegates simply sit and listen to the presenter all day, but one where their active participation is positively encouraged.

The events are primarily aimed at staff who have daily, hands-on responsibility for the management and administration of such policies and procedures. However, they will also be of great value to directors and management who need to fully understand what needs to be done to ensure the risk is managed according to the legislation. Thus, potentially embarrassing conflicts with the Health and Safety Executive and other authorities can be avoided, bearing in mind the latest draft bill from the government regarding Corporate Manslaughter.
